

EUROPE PREDICTS "WAR WITHIN WEEK"

ITALY RECALLS
ITS MINISTER:
FIGHT CERTAIN

Bombing Planes Expected
to Follow Departure of Vinci-Gigliucci

STOCK MART FALLS

Report British to Call for Defense Loan

LONDON, Oct. 1.—Ethiopian war
within a week, trumpeted with a great show of Italian strength in the mobilization of ten million Fascisti, was predicted in well-informed circles today on the basis of reports from the prospective belligerents.

In Addis Ababa, the signal for the Italian offensive was expected to be the departure of Count Vinci-Gigliucci, the Italian minister,
followed by a hail of bombs from Mussolini's hundred bombing
planes now massed in Eritrea.

Merchants Leaving
Count Vinci's departure was preceded today by the evacuation of several of the few remaining Italian merchants at Addis Ababa,
and the rest are expected to leave Saturday.

Indications at Rome, however,
were that Italy's war machine
would get into action with the quiet smoothness of a motor-car,
with no declaration of war and
no immediate hostilities on a large scale to grate on Britain's ears.

Italy, it was officially stated,
"may find it necessary" as a result of Ethiopian mobilization, already under way for a week, to send troops over the border into Italian Somaliland and Eritrea.

These forces, if sent, would follow the Ethiopian tribesmen right up to the point, 18 miles from the borders, to which Emperor Haile Selassie ordered them to withdraw.

Clash Inevitable
With Italian troops, straining at the leash, and Abyssinian warriors,
eager for a fight confronting each other, a clash precipitating general
hostilities would seem inevitable.

Meanwhile, Britain and France,
having reaffirmed their determination to stand by the League of Nations covenant in all cases of unprovoked aggression, whether in Africa or central Europe, sought
more concrete guarantees of mutual support.

The London Star today confirmed International News Service's dispatch of last week that Britain
is asking France for the use of her Mediterranean ports in the event of a blockade against Italy.

Also, according to the Daily Ex-press's Paris correspondent, it is

KINGSTON, Jamaica, Oct. 1.—
"Everybody is well," was the re-

Seventy members of the crew
and most of the baggage came hotel until arrangements can be made for transferring them to America.

The passengers will be picked up by the Volendam, a sister ship,

numerable ships have met grief.

America line offices.

the ship was not in the path of the West Indian hurricane that has been blowing through the Caribbean area and the sea

Jurors Deliberate Nine
Hours in New England
"American Tragedy"

WORCESTER, Mass., Oct. 1.— Newell Paige Sherman, 26, "model
youth" of Sutton, today was doomed to the electric chair for the murder of his wife, Alice, 22,
mother of his two babies.

A jury of 12 grim Yankees
brought in the verdict of first degree murder, with its mandatory
sentence of death, at 1:52 a. m.

The jurors deliberated nine hours and 19 minutes before they wrote the climax to this latest
"American Tragedy" in the dim
yellow lights of historic Worcester
county's courthouse.

Shows No Emotion
The giant Boy Scout leader and choir singer, who drowned his wife in Lake Singletary to be free to woo buxom Esther Magill, his 18-year-old sweetheart, of Purgatory road, Whitinsville, took the verdict standing up and without
so much as a tremor, though it
doubtlessly came as a sickening
surprise to him.

He walked out of the tense
courtroom, out of the gaze of the white-faced jurors, with a firm step. But when he was alone in the prisoner's dock he slumped
down on a wooden bench and brushed his eyes with his ponder-
ous hands and said:

"I am innocent, oh, I am innocent."

Roused from Sleep
He was stretched out full length asleep on his hard bench when the sharp fateful rap on the door of the jury room came at 1:40 this morning. The drowsing court attaches, attorneys and newspaper
men were galvanized into action.
A deputy shook the big defendant.

At 1:50 a. m. he was led into the courtroom between two deputies to the iron prisoners'
grill. He sat there with flushed cheeks as the jurors filed in and red headed Judge Thomas J. Hammond took the bench. The action

road in Deer Creek-twp from the Pennsylvania tracks north to Route 22, about 1 1/2 miles west of

of a lane extending about a half mile south of Route 22.

in a petition recently filed by a group of Deer Creek-twp landown-

Jurors Deliberate Nine Hours in New England "American Tragedy"

WORCESTER, Mass., Oct. 1—Newell Paige Sherman, 26, "model youth" of Sutton, today was doomed to the electric chair for the murder of his wife, Alice, 22, mother of his two babies.

A jury of 12 grim Yankees brought in the verdict of first degree murder, with its mandatory sentence of death, at 1:52 a. m.

The jurors deliberated nine hours and 19 minutes before they wrote the climax to this latest "American Tragedy" in the dim yellow lights of historic Worcester county's courthouse.

Shows No Emotion

The giant Boy Scout leader and choir singer, who drowned his wife in Lake Singletary to be free to woo buxom Esther Magill, his 15-year-old sweetheart, of Puritatory road, Whitinsville, took the verdict standing up and without so much as a tremor, though it doubtlessly came as a sickening surprise to him.

He walked out of the tense courtroom, out of the gaze of the white-faced jurors, with a firm step. But when he was alone in the prisoner's dock he slumped down on a wooden bench and brushed his eyes with his ponderous hands and said:

"I am innocent, oh, I am innocent."

Roused from Sleep

He was stretched out full length asleep on his hard bench when the sharp fateful rap on the door of the jury room came at 1:40 this morning. The drowsing court attaches, attorneys and newspapermen were galvanized into action. A deputy shook the big defendant.

At 1:50 a. m. he was led into the courtroom between two deputies to the iron prisoners' grill. He sat there with flushed cheeks as the jurors filed in and red headed Judge Thomas J. Hammond took the bench. The action

The county commissioners Monday viewed the property involved in the proposed extension of Kibby road in Deer creek-twp from the Pennsylvania tracks north to Route 22, about 1 1/2 miles west of Williamsport.

Make This Curly-Eared Dog for Some Youngster

PATTERN 5448

Personality—the chief feature of a good mascot or an adored toy. Here it is in this curly-eared, curly-tailed dog. Maybe he's a Pomeranian, perhaps a spaniel, but he's certainly a full-breed when it comes to being a joyous toy. His tail is a lovely handle—his floppy ears are sewn in so securely even pulling can't dislocate them! And his tail will be just as pert as this when you make the dog, for it's properly stuffed. As a mascot, he'd be lovely in a gay print or real loud velvet—a mascot must be heard, of course!

In pattern 5448 you will find a pattern and detailed directions for making the dog, and material requirements.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Herald Household Arts Dept., N. Court-st., Circleville, Ohio.

SEND $250 TO FERA OFFICES FOR EXPENSES

Money to Take Care of Skeleton Cleaning Up Relief Obligations

COLUMBUS, Oct. 1—The death knell of federal relief in Ohio sounded today as 13 more counties were informed that FERA organizations there will be liquidated by the middle of the current month.

The dole stops in eleven counties today and has already stopped in 10 counties placed on the stoppage list last month. Despite authoritative reports that direct aid will continue in some form beyond Nov. 1, the deadline set by Washington authorities, the counties where direct relief has ceased were awarded only administrative expenses in the semi-monthly budgetary allotments.

Pickaway-co was allotted $250 to take care of administrative expense of the skeleton force that is being maintained to clear up outstanding obligations. The FERA unit here was liquidated Sept. 15.

On Oct. 7, the following counties will see their FERA organizations liquidated: Guernsey, Washington, Van Wert, Fayette, Lorain, Ashland, Delaware, Sandusky, Crawford and Huron. Butler, Morgan and Jackson counties are scheduled for liquidation Oct. 15.

The axe already has fallen on: Auglaize, Brown, Carroll, Champaign, Fulton, Harrison, Madison, Pickaway, Putnam, Wayne, Defiance, Fairfield, Henry, Knox, Mercer, Tuscarawas, Williams, Seneca, Coshocton, and Clinton counties.

CORN LOAN RATE SLASH FORECAST

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1—A reduction in the corn loan rate of the AAA from 55 cents, the prevailing rate this year, to between 40 and 46 cents was foreseen today at the AAA.

The rate of loan is not expected to be announced until the 1936 program is agreed upon about Nov. 1. Last year's total loans to farmers to aid them in planting their 1935 crop approximated $18,900,000, chiefly used on the seed program to aid in conservation of good seed corn. Because of the unprecedented drought last year, there was a big shortage in seed corns. No such shortage is anticipated for this year, hence the expected reduction in the loan rate.

was fast and intensely dramatic as the verdict was read.

Judge Hammond thanked the jury. He said: "You gentlemen can look the world in the face with the satisfaction that comes from a duty well-performed."

The jury was excused. Sherman was beckoned to his feet and led out of the courtroom. There was not an expression on his big, fleshy face. But he was a pathetic figure. He reminded you: somehow of a big dancing bear as he waltzed out of the courtroom by two diminutive deputies.

In his cell he muttered huskily to a reporter: "It's tough."

Then he added: "I'm innocent, oh, I'm innocent."

He was asked how he felt about Esther Magill, the girl who helped doom him on the witness stand, though he once had vowed undying love for her. He smiled a small, sad smile and said:

"I don't blame Esther. I don't blame Esther a bit."

being suggested in official French quarters that the two countries' general army staffs and admiralty staffs should work out mutual defense plans, as was done before the great war.

London's stock exchange reflected the war reports, with British government securities one quarter to seven eighths point lower, and a small turnover.

This was partly brought about by continued reports in Throgmorton street that Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, might shortly foreshadow a billion dollar defense loan.

Capt. Anthony Eden, British minister for league affairs, arrived by air from Geneva and Paris today, without making any statement.

He will report on league intervention in the Ethiopian crisis Wednesday to a full meeting of the cabinet.

Marking the first time in a Duluth, Minn., court that a 15-year-old boy has been required to defend himself against life imprisonment on a charge of first degree murder, Robert Douglas Quigley, shown in the custody of Deputy Sheriff Sam Altman, arrives in the courthouse to face trial for the murder of Harlan Townsend, in August, 1934. Quigley, arrested nearly eight months after the slaying, is alleged to have given police a signed confession. Later he repudiated it with the filing of an alibi, as now required by law.

ASHVILLE SCHOOL NEWS

Fifteen Ashville teachers attended the Circleville County Teachers' meeting last Saturday.

One new typewriter has been added to the equipment in the commercial department which continues to grow in enrollment. This department plans to put out its own newspaper at regular intervals hereafter.

The fourth grade monthly paper was out a week or so ago.

The September meeting of the Ashville-Harrison P. T. A. was held last Wednesday evening and was well attended. Miss Oesterle gave an interesting lecture on citizenship. Coffee and doughnuts were the contribution of the social committee.

Miss Virginia Casteel is the only new teacher to be found in the Ashville schools this year. She teaches English and Physical Education.

A representative from the Baker Art Gallery and one from Sherick's was down from Columbus last week and gave the senior class their prices on their pictures. The Montrose man will come this week. The Senior English class is now reading "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow" by Irving. When it has been completed they will be given a short quiz.

It was decided by the student body of Ashville High school that the Athletic association by laws should be changed. Each student that pays a small fee gains a membership in the association and gets a student's ticket to all the home athletic events. They have elected as their officers the following: president, Henry Steinbrook, vice president, Walter Gregg; secretary and treasurer, Myra Wagner. A membership drive will start next week.

The Senior class gave a weiner roast Friday night Sept. 27. The majority of the class and their friends attended the party. The party was chaperoned by Miss Casteel.

The Seniors have voted to put out an annual this year and it will be in the hands of the following: editor, Leah Jean Vause; assistant manager, Gerald Miller; business manager, Marcella Roase, social editor, James Gray; social editor, Hilda Fay Alexander; athletics reporter, Charles and Myra Wagner; class poet, Gretchen Hedges; Class artist, Henry Steinbrook.

The Freshman class held their first meeting Friday Sept. 27. The officers elected were:

EUROPE'S POWDER - KEG

SO far as negotiations looking toward peaceful adjustment of the Italo-Ethiopian controversy are concerned, the situation is anything but encouraging. It Duce has aroused his country to a state of militant fury. It is doubtful whether he could halt the Ethiopian conquest if he so desired.

Premier Mussolini maintains, of course, that his African objectives are comparable to the aims and methods employed by England in building up the British Empire. He feels that he, too, is merely assuming the "white man's burden" and that the civilizing effects of Italian domination in Ethiopia would be for the good of mankind.

It must be recognized, however, that conditions are not the same now as they were in the early days of British ascendancy. Then there was no international machinery for the handling of world affairs. Mussolini's position, in short, is that of a man who tries to justify present-day murder by recalling the ethical standards of primitive barbarism.

Unfortunately for the immediate welfare of civilization, the period of effective debate seems to have expired. Europe is all set for a cataclysm which may make the World War look mild by comparison.
Unless some way can be found of retracing the threatening steps already taken, ignition of the powder-keg of militarism seems almost inevitable. What will happen then is too devastating a thought for people in whose memories the fields of Flanders remain a source of lingering sorrow.

SOUND ADVISE FOR BANKERS

FRANK F. BROOKS, president of the Pennsylvania Bankers' association, advocates a colossal advertising campaign designed to
"dissipate economic illiteracy, route demagoguery and put government and politics in their true relationship to national life."

Well may America's bankers consider the proposal.
Advertising has real educational value. It might easily be used to banish the ignorance and misunderstanding upon which political quacks
and economic shysters invariably thrive.

The banking interests of the nation have been woefully negligent in failing to carry their message directly to the people. And that negligence has encouraged scatter-brained, amateur financiers to sponsor the wildest and most reckless schemes for control of public and private wealth.

A farflung advertising campaign looking toward the spread of common sense in the fields of government and finance would be decidedly worth while if it were handled by trained men in touch with the viewpoint of the average citizen.

America will not be fertile soil for the roots of crackpot panaceas provided the people are kept constantly informed as to the foundations of sane and rational economics.

Reforms come slowly. The last thing that free people are willing to give up is something that hurts them.

Cartoonists always depict Uncle Sam as having long legs.
Presumably because they've been pulled so often.

IMPORTANT DECISIONS

HABITUAL players of both rubber
and duplicate games, if an expert,
are continually confronted with having to make important decisions.
Often the best procedure depends upon whether rubber bridge or dupli-

correct decision is alike for both kinds of game. The two deals which follow illustrate close questions of proper procedure.

The Romance Racket

MARIE BLIZARD

READ THIS FIRST:

Fun, parties, pretty clothes and beaus are things unattractive Carol Kennedy had never desired until she looked into the eyes of Dr. Owen Craip, fiancé of her cousin, Kathy Prestice. Kathy is marrying Owen for his social prestige alone. When Carol, an orphan, comes into a vast fortune, she suddenly decides to leave her old home in Connecticut and seek freedom and happiness in New York. Isabel Bronson, an old school chum, takes Carol to her first cocktail party where she meets Gary Crandall, playboy, who agrees to show her how to become a fascinating woman. She emerges from a beauty shop a changed girl and,
with proper clothes, finds herself a most attractive person. Isabel helps her find an apartment and Gary finds her a job, knowing nothing of her wealth. At a party she meets Manfred Morris, theatrical producer.
When her other job fails to materialize, Carol is persuaded by Isabel to call on Morris.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 14

CAROL LITERALLY sank into
the deep leather chair and faced Manfred Morris across his great desk. With shaking fingers she tucked stray strands of her hair
neatly into place and smoothed her skirt across knees that trembled.

"Sorry, I didn't connect your name immediately," he said.

"I'm afraid I'm not the person you thought I was," she offered falter-ingly.

Morris smiled. "Who did you think I thought you were?"

"Well"—Carol tried to keep the wondering notes from her voice.
"Last night I told you I was an actress. I didn't mean that exactly.
I meant that when I said I was Mr.
Banks' secretary, I was acting because I have never been one before.

To tell you the truth, I'm not Mr.
Banks' secretary at all. He had promised me the job but I haven't really got it."

"That's fine," he answered, waiting for her to go on.

"And . . . and then when you said
you had a telegram from Hollywood
about me, I knew you had the wrong
person. I . . . I don't know anyone in Hollywood."

"Oh, that," Morris dismissed it with a gesture. "That was for the benefit of the other ladies. I had no telegram from Hollywood."

Carol waited with wonder for his next words.

"Like to be an actress?" He shot
the question at her.

"I . . . you see I haven't . . . my life . . ." Carol floundered.

"Married?"
Carol shook her head.

"Live with your family?"
Again she shook her head in nega-tion.

"What have you been doing? How do you support yourself?"

Carol was beginning to regret the lies she had determined on in her fight for independence. It was so difficult keeping up with a role.

"I have a little money," she began. "My mother left me some.
That is enough to live on but I want to work and you see, well, I haven't yet found a job. I thought perhaps I might learn secretarial work until I discovered some other work that I might fit into."

"Secretarial work will never get you anywhere and you can go far,"
he said slowly, studying her. "When a woman possesses beauty, she should use it. You have it and it can get you many things. Wouldn't you like to have furs and jewels?"

A she home? Cars?"
Carol smiled a little. She could have those things but she didn't tell him that. She made no answer.

"Wouldn't you like to have people say 'that is Carol Kennedy, the actress'?"

"Not particularly," she said and then, thinking her answer might sound ungrateful, she softened it with a bright smile.

"The theatre is a hard school, my
dear, but it is the most fascinating pursuit in the world. It isn't all glamor by any means. It's work day and night."

Then Carol caught some of the fire of his enthusiasm. Work. Things to do to absorb a restless spirit. She sought that.

"Do you mean, Mr. Morris, that you are willing to give me a chance?" she asked after a moment.

"That's it, my dear, if you would like it."

"I would," she said. "But . . . you see I don't know anything about these things. I don't understand why you offer this chance to me."

"Perhaps I don't myself," he answered. "But there is a compelling quality of sincerity about you that I like to watch. I think others might like to also. I sensed it last night when I saw you at Banks'. I knew it when I saw you on the terrace and you thought you were alone. I'll take a chance on you."

"But if I don't make good?" she asked in a small voice.

"I'm not going to make you a star," he said coldly. "I'll send you over to Mike Jacobs at the Alston.
He's casting this afternoon. Let me know how you get along. Mention my name. Be a good girl. Work hard. Get plenty of rest. Don't gain an ounce. Keep just the way you are . . . particularly that inner quality you have."

He smiled at her encouragingly
and rose. That was Carol's dismissal. She walked through the office too thrilled to see the interested stares of the hopeful girls who would have given much to have been in her little shoes at that moment.

Carol tried to eat her lunch at a drug store counter. Hope, fear, excitement blocked her throat as she asked herself dozens of questions
she couldn't answer. What kind of show was being put? Would they ask her to sing? To dance? She couldn't do either. Would they ask her whether she had had any experience? Would she be so frightened she couldn't move a step or open her mouth to speak?

She didn't even know where the Alston theatre was. The telephone book gave her the information, but she was lost. The house was dark, hoping she could find her way. The windows of the locked doors
were dirty and the boards outside were innocent of advertising. She must have heard the name incorrectly.

When, however, he saw chattering
girls hurrying along in their spike-heeled shoes, their mouths scumbled with grease, their eyes heavy with makeup, saw them turn into the alley
beside the theatre, she remembered that stage entrances are usually placed in alleys. And, of course, that was where she should go to find Mr. Jacobs.

She pulled open the heavy door
and found herself in a dim, harmless hall. She could hear the shrill voices of girls, the tinny echo of an old piano interrupted by shouts.
She walked toward the sound and found herself on the stage.

"All right, sister, set in line," a voice commanded instantly from the front row of the darkened house.
When her eyes became accustomed to the dimness below the bright stage, she saw that the whole first row was occupied by what she took
to be the director and his assistants.

She waited to ask for Mr. Jacobs
but the immediate command left her speechless. She stood next to the last girl in line and waited. And waited. One by one, from the other end of the line, the girls stepped forward, walked lazily across the stage, pausing in the exact center of the stage to draw up a skirt revealing more than lovely knees, resumed
their saunter and took their places
at the end of the line.

As it came nearer Carol's turn,
she felt her ears burning with embarrassment but since none of the other girls seemed to mind and it was the thing to do, Carol tried to emulate their easy saunter and gestures.

"Now for a little routine," the man
called Benny said smartly. "Let 'er
go, Bud."

The tiny piano grated out its sing-
song and one by one the girls went into their last-time steps. Carol could pull her skirt up to her shapely knees but time-stepping was Greek to her.

"I can't, I don't know how," she said miserably when it came her turn. She wished fervently that she had never come into the theatre.

"Well, for the love of the music,"
cried, turning to the others at his side. "She can't even do a time-step
and she tries to get into a Morris show!" Then to Carol, "Better luck next time, sister. Okay, blonde, you with the red shoes, your turn!"

Carol had heard of people feeling like the proverbial two cents. At that moment she didn't put her own value that high. She was almost blind with embarrassment and didn't see the young man with the big glasses who leapt onto the stage and whispered into Benny's ear.

"What name?" Benny asked him.
Then, he called to Carol, "Say, sister, wait a minute, what's your name?"

"Kennedy," she said in a low voice.

"Oh, Miss Kennedy," Benny said
it as though she had said the Duchess of Pickford—"Take off your coat. 'Marge'—he called a girl
in a bathing suit who was sitting on the piano—'take Miss Kennedy over. Show her that time-step.' He beamed on Carol.

When Carol had tried it for the twentieth time, her tutor whispered
between kisses, "Who's your boy friend?"

"Haven't got one," Carol whispered back.

"Oh, no?" Marge said and her voice spoke volumes of incredulity.

Roosevelt Has Edge in California Through Allegiance of Workers

EDITORS' NOTE: This is the third of a series of political discussions gauging the temper of the country as the President travels
through the West.

LOS ANGELES—The last time
Franklin Roosevelt visited Southern California—in 1932—he was aided in making the state safe for Democracy by Will Rogers, Jack
Warner and an unusually warm
California evening.

The Rogers humor, the Warner
movieband pyrotechnics and the weather attracted more than 100-000 people to the Los Angeles
Coliseum. There they felt the magic of Franklin Roosevelt's voice,
and from that time on there was no need for further effort by Democratic workers in Southern California.

Roosevelt to use Hollywood language had "gone to town" with the average voter.

During his second visit to the Golden State, Roosevelt
faces a situation in which
class prejudice is coagulating
into two hostile, sometimes bitter groups.

Over the largest of these, the working people of the state, Roosevelt still can command unquestioned allegiance.

From the other group, which includes not only the wealthier but those who, for want of better description, might be tagged white collarites, there is passionate antiosity.

Powerful Townsendsites

Rallying behind Herbert Hoover
in 1932, this group polled 900,000
votes. Democratic leaders in their franker moments admit that without Will Rogers, without Jack Warner's fireworks, and regardless of the weather, the probable Republican minimum in 1936
will be 1,000,000 votes, out of the 2,500,000 which will be cast.

This leaves one relatively small group of voters in a position almost to dictate the way California
will swing, one year and one day.

1800—Spain ceded Louisiana to France.

1864—Cotton was selling in New York at $1.20 a pound.

1890—Weather Bureau was created in Department of Agriculture.

1923—Russia adopted the Gregorian calendar, dropping 13
days from its records.

Congressman McGroarty

In a state where thousands have come to bask in the California
sunshine and enjoy life until they die, Townsendism is a tremendous factor. If the kindly-eyed physician, who has become almost a divine leader to California's retired citizens, suddenly should throw
his weight behind the Republicans,
The New Deal probably would be finished in this vital political arena.

This explains why Congressman John S. McGroarty, at first something of a joke in Washington, has become such a pivotal person in California.

Congressman McGroarty, according to his boast in the Congressional Directory, was made Post Laureate of California by an act of the State Legislature. In Washington he was known as a leader of the Townsend forces and for the fact that his tombstone

was to bear the inscription: "He was a neverspinner."

Before Congress adjourned, McGroarty got tired of running errands

CHICAGO 6 TO 5 IN BETTING ON EVE OF BIG TITLE SERIES

About This And That In Many Sports

Cub Hurlers Have Edge

When it comes to comparing the all-important pitching staffs of the principals in the current world's series, Chicago of the National League and Detroit of the American League, we cannot help but favor the Cubs. For instance, Manager Charlie Grimm has Lee, Warneke, Root, French, Henshaw and Carlton to pick from; Manager Mickey Cochrane can use Rowe, Bridges, or Auker and then he must select an outsider, either Crowder, a prayer ball hurler, or Sullivan or Lawson or Hoge or Sorrell or anyone of several others all of about the same caliber.

TWO GOOD SOUTHPAWS

The Cubs have the advantage of a good southpaw selection in either French or Henshaw, who in our estimation, might be the surprise of the series—Sullivan and Hoge are the only lefties on Cochrane's staff—True, it has been said and probably proved, neither Warneke nor Root are series hurlers, but they'll be plenty tough for the Tigers.

THEN TIGERS GET EDGE

Cochrane is a better catcher than Hartnett but not more dangerous with the bat, Greenberg is better than Cavaretta at first base but the young Italian might surprise in a series despite his lack of experience. Gehringer is ahead of Billy Herman at the keystone spot. Rogell and Jurgens are about even at short, Hack is better than Owen at third, Galan is hot in left field, so is Lindstrom in center and Demaree is plenty tough in right while Goslin, Jo-Jo White and Pete Fox make up a pretty good outfield for the Tigers.

EXPERTS DIFFERING

The Cubs have youth and zip while the Tigers have experience and almost the same zip. Hugh Fullerton picks the Tigers on their consistency and punch. Dave Walsh names the Cubs because they are hot, other writers pick the teams for various reasons. You take your choice, too, it's lots of fun, and the series starts Wednesday in Detroit with Schoolboy Rowe and Don Warneke expected to be the starting hurlers.

WARNEKE AND ROWE PITCH; DETROIT QUIET

Both Teams to Have Final Workouts at Navin Field This Afternoon

By DAVIS J. WALSH

DETROIT, Oct. 1—All was quiet this morning in this city of boisterous and primitive men, except for the basso who was singing the Prisoner's Song across the area-way. He sang badly but with the gusto of one who feels that tradition is with him. Last year, they ran up and down the streets for the world series, mouthing in a strange and hideous way and, when a visiting ball player displeased them, they hurled melancholy vegetation. This time, they are deceptively tranquil and refined.

They don't stand in the streets on the eve of a world series and gaze with unrestrained glee. They are standing in bars and apparently won't be out until just before the first game between the Detroit Tigers and Chicago Cubs tomorrow. Detroit, it seems, has grown up since the Deans and the Cardinals left here last year with just about everything, including the week's supply of breakfast buns. After all, the series novelty may have worn a little thin.

Just 29 Persons

Besides, they haven't been able to work up a good, upstanding hate against the Chicago Cubs. All the Cubs have done is win the National League pennant by running through 21 straight victories and, so far they represent no more than just so many blank faces under a cap vizor. As a matter of fact, the Cubs are regarded a little patronizingly hereabouts.

They are 6 to 5 in the betting and nobody intends to regard them other than pityingly until such time as a spike is flashed or a resident player is jostled with uncouth vigor. After that, it will be every man for himself and please bring your own potato salad.

Meantime, just to show that this is no negative occasion, the hotels have moved everything out of the lobby except the bell captain and are selling bed space right up to the doors of the executive offices. There were stories in the papers of people arriving here from Switzerland and France and even Australia, the latter's representative arriving by boat, train and plane. What, no Indian guide?

Ohio U Victory Puts New Light on Buckeye Joust

By GILSON WRIGHT

DELAWARE, Oct. 1—Ohio university's 6 to 0 upset of Illinois last Saturday, in what the Illini had thought would be the usual first-game victory, has thrown an entirely different light on the Buckeye conference football championship picture.

Rated by most Buckeye coaches, including Don Peden himself, as a fourth place team this season, the Bobcats have leaped suddenly into the dark horse class. Beating a team that many thought might be a contender in the Big Ten certainly should elevate Ohio to the top of its own league.

Still Favor Cincinnati

Cincinnati still is out in front as

Moreover, one of the papers has a "reader of destinies" who is going to cover the series from an angle, proving that there is nothing like a world series, unless it's the Barnum and Bailey circus. Speculators' tickets for the local end of the series, in case you care, are $50. Judge Kencaw Mountain lands will arrive in the morning, and so, it seems, will Mr. Will Terry who was to have managed a club in this series but was taken unexpectedly defeated.

Celebrities Present

Babe Ruth, who was supposed to buy the Braves but ended up by being discharged as a right fielder, will be here. So will Bill McKechnie, Eddie Collins, Jimmy Dykes, eight members of the Cleveland club; Bill Benswanger, of Pittsburgh, and Tris Speaker.

Tomorrow's weather, incidentally, is supposed to be right; clear but cool.

The Cubs, herded into town by Manager Charley Grimm and a few train loads of fans, arrived last night and put up at the Book Cadillac. They will work out today at Navin field, utterly new to them as it is, more or less to the Tigers. The bleacher encroachments have changed the playing space by no inconsiderable degree.

Crimm has declared himself to pitch Warneke, Root and Lee in the order named. Yesterday, Mickey Cochrane said he would go only with three pitchers, Rowe, Bridges and Auker.

But those kind of statements are strictly subject to revision. For all Cochrane, or anyone else knows, he might be using three pitchers before the first game is over.

the likely repeating champion, but Ohio cannot now be classed any worse than second, although both Miami and Ohio Wesleyan must be figured as contenders.

Marshall, too, has given indications of power which may place the Herd in the first division, but Dayton continues to be the cellar candidate as the result of its none too powerful showing against Cincinnati Saturday night when the Bearcats took a one-up lead over other Buckeye teams by defeating Dayton 29 to 0. Marshall won over Concord, 31 to 0.

Only one Buckeye game is on this week's schedule, although all the conference teams, except Ohio, have games. Ohio Wesleyan, fresh from its 49 to 0 rout of Heidelberg, will try to chalk up a Buckeye victory at the expense of Dayton in a game Friday night at Dayton. Marshall entertains Morris-Harvey Friday afternoon at Huntington, W. Va., and on Saturday afternoon Miami will meet Case at Cleveland. Cincinnati will take on South Dakota State at Cincinnati Saturday night. Ohio university is idle.

Miami-Case Close

Miami's game with Case should be close. The Redskins came through with a 33 to 7 win over Eastern Kentucky Teachers, but Case showed power defensively while losing to Carnegie Tech, 6 to 3, so the Scientists of Cleveland may throw a monkey wrench into the Miami attack.

If Ohio Wesleyan wins its game with Dayton this week, the Battling Bishops will move into a tie with Cincinnati for the Buckeye lead, each with one victory.

Next week Marshall plays at Dayton and Ohio Wesleyan at Miami in games that will provide a further glimpse of the strength or weakness of the Buckeye teams in comparison with one another.

OFFICIALS FOR GRANDVIEW TILT DISCLOSED TODAY

E. E. Reger, faculty manager of athletics, announced today the officials who will handle the first Central Buckeye game of the year on Friday when Grandview invades the local gridiron.

Colman of Ohio Wesleyan, assistant coach at Lancaster, will be referee; Jerry Katherman of Ohio Northern, former Capital university assistant, will be the umpire, and Charles Harris, former Capital athlete, will be the head linesman.

Coach Jack Landrum is stressing blocking in his team's drills this week in an effort to provide some holes for his ball carriers to speed through for gains.

In this era of Joe Louis and Mickey Cochrane, a super-intelligent Detroit is one who recalls that Henry Ford has something to do with autos.

A Highland Fling?

Clyde Coffman

Though Clyde Coffman appears to be in the throes of a highland fling, he's actually winning the broad jump, one of the events of the pentathlon at Palmer stadium, Princeton university. The Kansas A. C. star won the pentathlon title with a 3,084-point performance.

SUCCEEDS MONAHAN?

TIPPY DYE AND SAM BUSICH

Ohio State is going to make sure of gaining that extra point after touchdown this fall. Here is Sam Busich of Lorain practicing place kicking with Tippy Dye, quarterback of Pomerooy holding the ball.

ATLANTA YOUTH HELPS CAPITAL

COLUMBUS, Oct. 1—Oakley Turner, scrappy sophomore gridder from Atlanta, Pickaway-co, gave an excellent account of himself in his initial college football game against the Toledo Rockets on the Toledo gridiron Saturday night. Capital won 6 to 0 as a result of a pass intercepted by Captain Jan Laitos, veteran center, who, playing the best game of his college career, toted the pigskin 55 yards for the only marker of the game.

The defeat was particularly humiliating for the Toledo aggregation who thumbed their nose at the Ohio conference of which Capital is a member by starting practice before the agreed date, and who having billed the Capital contest as a warm-up affair for their game with Boston U., one week hence were openly predicting at least a five touchdown victory over the Columbus eleven.

Capital's score came in the middle of the second period and thereafter Don Elsass, Capital university quarterback, chose to protect the six point lead by playing a defensive game.

BAER BABES! NO, NO!

OAKLAND, Cal., Oct. 1—Max Baer declined today to discuss reports that his bride, the former Mary Ellen Sullivan of Washington, D. C., is expecting a "blessed event."

"That's something you'd better ask Mrs. Baer," Max said.

Baer's mother, commenting on the report, said: "I wish it were true, but it isn't."

Buckeye Prexy

Dr. O. C. Bird

Dr. Bird, director of athletics at Ohio university, is president this year of the Buckeye Intercollegiate Athletic conference, which is now in its tenth year. Member colleges are Ohio university, Marshall college, Ohio Wesleyan university, University of Cincinnati and Miami university, while University of Dayton is a probationary member, having been admitted last May. The probation period ends next May.

"Roosevelt makes $500,000,000 available to WPA and PWA." Mama's holding her breath; the next appropriation may be for PAW.

KENTUCKY PLAYS BAFFLE BUCKEYES

COLUMBUS, Oct. 1—With the start of classes today at Ohio State, Coach Francis Schmidt's Buckeye squad will change its practice route from two daily sessions to one lone drill late in the afternoon.

Schmidt is anything but happy over the change since the showing of the Buckeyes lately has indicated they will need plenty of hard work before tackling Kentucky in the opener here Saturday.

Yesterday's practice drill clearly demonstrated that the Scarlet Warriors still had a long way to go before constructing an adequate defense for Chet Lynne's Kentucky wildcats.

With a reserve team utilizing Wildcat plays, which Schmidt brought back from his scouting trip, the Buckeye varsity appeared baffled by the activities of the second-stringers.

Although the reserves did not make lengthy gains through the varsity, they had the latter baffled to the extent that the Buckeye regulars were easily faked out of position.

If the weather is suitable late today, the Bucks will probably be sent through their last hard scrimmage before the inaugural encounter.

The inalienable and sacred rights of human personality are indeed regarded as trivial when the bones of 6,000,000 men can be stewn across the fields for a cause which is still unknown.—Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen, Catholic University.

Buckeye Big Boy

Gomer Jones

Skipper of the team picked to win the Western conference championship is the job of Gomer Jones, Cleveland, captain of Ohio State university's eleven. Jones is a center, displacement 200 pounds.

OHIO HUNTERS INVADe WOODS

Bag Limit for Season Ending Oct. 15 is Four; Extra Wardens Used

COLUMBUS, Oct. 1—Possessed with plenty of ammunition, and confidence, Ohio hunters today invaded woods and other game habitats in quest of squirrels as the season opened.

The state conservation department estimated that between 75,000 and 100,000 hunters were expected to participate in the opening-day squirrel hunt.

Continues to Oct. 15

The season will continue until Oct. 15, date set for the opening of the rabbit hunting season.

With the opening of the Roosevelt Game Preserve in southern Ohio, it marked the first time in history that Ohio hunters have had access to public hunting grounds.

In order to keep a thorough check on the amount of game killed on the preserve, hunters were required to check in and again report when they left the grounds. Lawrence Woodell, state conservation commissioner, said that additional game wardens have been hired for the 90-day duration of the hunting season.

Woodell also warned that the squirrel bag limit of four to each hunter will be stringently enforced and it will be unlawful to buy or sell squirrels.

Many Squirrels

Conservation division officials said the 1935 supply of squirrels was more plentiful than it has been for the past 15 years.

Strict pre-season law enforcement and plenty of mast food were the reasons advanced for the large amount of squirrels.

STARS TO ANSWER OHIO FROSH CALL

COLUMBUS, Oct. 1—Approximately 200 freshmen football aspirants today were expected to report for the first yearling grid drill at Ohio State.

Coach Fritz Mackey, former assistant to George Gauthier at Ohio Wesleyan, will start his first season as head Buckeye freshman coach. He replaced Dick Larkins who accepted the head mentorship at Rochester University.

Mike Fernella, huge Akron North boy, and two members of Massillon's great eleven last year, Steve Birkich and Wendell Lohr, were among the outstanding fresh gridgers expected to report.

HE LOST

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—Police arrested panting and puffing David F. Leonard, 45-year-old stockbroker, charging him with intoxication after they found him running, not shortless, but pantsless, costless, shirtless and hatless, in an effort to win $500 that he could trot 16 miles to the beach, take a dip, and trot home again. Police called off all bets.

LEGISLATORS STUDY PLANS FOR TAXATION

Two Committees Begin Work
Wednesday; Many Problems Are Faced

COLUMBUS, Oct. 1.—Two legislative committees will return to the capital tomorrow to continue their work despite the failure of the assembly to agree on major programs during the special session, adjourned until Oct. 8.

Members of the House labor committee will convene to discuss proposed legislation to make Ohio's old age pension laws conform to provisions of the federal social security program, and other suggestions for improving the act providing aid for the aged.

At the same time members of the House taxation sub-committee will meet to go over the field expected to present numerous pitfalls for the legislature at the second special session which the governor has said he will call late in October.

From this group will come measures designed to raise millions of dollars of new tax revenue to support the state's public school foundation bill, possibly poor relief and old age pensions.

Numerous suggested new tax proposals will worry senators, but committee hearings are not expected to begin until after the first special session winds up its work.

Among the new tax proposals under consideration are:

Proposed extension of the retail sales tax, which expires at the end of the year and which legislators have virtually agreed, must be extended at least another year.

Suggested sales tax on services in addition to retail sales. Such a measure would cover bootblacks, laundries, presseries, taxicabs, etc.

Projected state income tax measure, offered to the legislature's regular session by Rep. P. E. Ward (R), Chardon, a member of the tax committee, but turned down.

Eating Beneath Fall Skies
Eating out of doors takes on a special glamour under fall skies. Fragrant bacon broiling over an open fire—potatoes and corn smothering smoking hot from glowing embers—a crisp breeze with healthy appetites—that's a picnic in the fall!

We all know that food makes the picnic. Proper packing and transporting of it greatly enhances the fun. A simple meal is most enjoyable, and particularly so when you say, "Let's not have such a variety of food next time, but plenty of what we do have!"

A fall picnic isn't a success without the glow of a crackling fire. We should choose a meal to be cooked on the spot. It must be easily prepared without requiring any great care.

Here is a favorite menu:

- Fall Picnic Menu
Broiled Hamburger Cakes
Bacon
Pickles
Ripe Tomatoes
Buttered Rolls or Buns
Doughnuts or Cookies
Coffee

The meat should be formed into patties and seasoned at home. Wrap each patty in waxed paper, or pack them in a waxed paper-lined pan. The tomatoes may be eaten as a refreshing salad if a jar of mayonnaise or a bottle of French dressing is included, or they may be slipped with bacon into buttered rolls to make tasty sandwiches.

If your journey is a long one, extend the menu to include a thermos jug of soup. There is nothing quite so eagerly welcomed at the end of a long trip as steaming hot soup.

Here is another menu that features Pirate steak:

- Steak Picnic Menu
Pirate Steak
Whole Tomatoes
Hot Buns
Cabbage Salad
Pickles
Fresh Fruit or Apple Pie
Coffee

For the Pirate Steaks buy tenderloin or tender round steak cut about 1 inch thick. Divide the steak into pieces for individual servings. Place one of these pieces on a green branch whittled to a point. Follow the steak with a thick slice of onion, and this with a strip of bacon. Cook slowly. When done season generously with salt, pepper and chili sauce and place between the buns.

POLICE WATCHING FOR STORE THIEVES

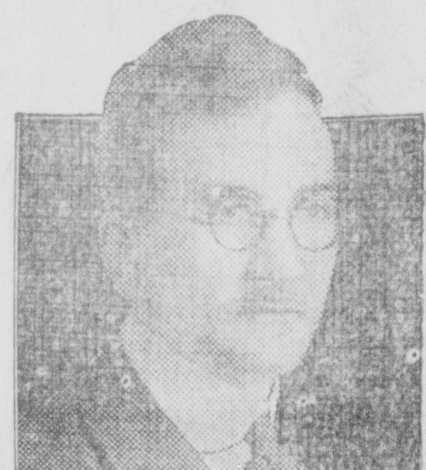

Pickaway-co authorities kept a close check on the highways leading from Lancaster Monday afternoon following a daring holdup at an Atlantic and Pacific store by two unmasked men.

A lone clerk in the store was forced to lie on his face in a rear room while the men took change from the cash register and cigarettes. The exact amount of money taken was not announced.

Contraband Taken From Drunks, Spilled

City hall smelled like a distillery Monday afternoon when officers emptied a collection of bottles removed from drunks. Police estimated the collection contained about three gallons of liquor, all kinds.

The bottles were smashed and the liquor went down a drain pipe.

Appointment of James M. Landis, 33, former Harvard law professor, as the new head of the Securities and Exchange Commission, "satisfies" Wall Street. Two years ago, when Landis, who helped to draw up the securities and exchange bill, was mentioned for chairman of the new commission, Wall Street protested violently, terming Landis a "brain trust." As a member of the commission, however, Landis has proved a capable executive and now Wall Street likes him. He has the "blessing" of the retiring chairman, Joseph M. A Sporting Code for Marriages

That's What Clarence Darrow Believes Will Aid Eventually in Stopping Tragedies Such as the Recent One in Which a Wife Shot Her Husband's Secretary

Mrs. Darrow

Clarence Darrow

CHICAGO — Clarence Darrow believes in a sporting code for marriages—his wife says so!

It is a sporting code that would not permit such tragedies as that in which Mrs. Etta Reisman killed Virginia Seigh, her husband's 23-year-old secretary, on Long Island recently—nor a great many other of the marital misfortunes which daily fill the newspapers. It will be recalled that the secretary had been staying at the Reisman house and that Mrs. Reisman's husband is alleged to have said finally that he preferred the girl to his wife, and was preparing to leave home when the tragedy occurred.

Human Problems Now
Interviewed by your correspondent, the "grand old man of the courts" made known his strong personal conviction upon the subject of such a code made it known through his "mouthpiece," Mrs. Darrow.

The man who defended Bill Haywood and Gene Debs, and the McNamara boys, and Loeb and Leopold, and Massie and the Honolulu "honor slayers"—the man who crossed swords with Bryan—no longer concerns himself with individual cases which keep the police, prosecutors and presses busy—but with human problems.

And the problem of unhappy marriage is one of the foremost among such problems. Darrow believes in marriage and he believes in divorce—but he thinks that the marriage problem should be taken out of the courts, where he has battled for 5 long years.

Clarence Darrow is 78—and a little tired. He leans more and more on his "mouthpiece," the charming and efficient Mrs. Darrow. She tells you that what "she says—that's what he says." And so to get the point of view of one of the nation's greatest "mouthpieces," one goes to Mrs. Darrow. "Yes, there should be a sporting code for married people," says Mrs. Darrow. "Such a code would make a situation such as the New York case impossible. Mr. Darrow has expressed that opinion publicly and privately on many occasions."

Step Out Gracefully

"It would be a code which would allow one who has become wearied or dissatisfied with a marriage to express honestly that feeling to the other. It would demand that either wife or husband should step gracefully from the picture."

"This is an age where it shouldn't be necessary for anyone to be killed to solve a problem of that kind."

"Mr. Darrow hasn't read about this case and he probably won't. It has been explained to him and he sticks to his original idea. His idea for a code. You might call it a 50-50 agreement for fair play."

"In this Reisman case why didn't the wife get out if she didn't like the situation? What could she hope to gain by killing her rival—after all a girl who had lived with them a long time and who was more like a daughter to her?"

Why Bound for Life?

"Why, today, should anyone be forced to consider himself or herself bound for life if he or she is unhappy in a marriage? No, married people should adopt a sporting code."

And so, the Reisman case, as an individual problem, is only one of the many which go to build up the major problems with which the famous attorney concerns himself. Of the facts, the legalities which surround Mrs. Reisman, her husband, the slain secretary, he knows nothing.

Of the motives which have governed the principals in the case, of the human, everyday instincts and impulses, the circumstances which brought about the situation, he has

POLICE HEAR THREE REPORTS OF THEFTS

Ray White now on W. Main-st., reported an Oliver typewriter was missing from his store. A gray push cart with iron wheels was reported stolen from the alley by the New American hotel by Pearl Dolli-sen, E. Mill-st. Eyman Wolf, E. Mound-st., said someone took $2.20 from a drawer in his home. Police believe the home was entered with a key.

Girl Scout News

Circleville Girl Scout Troop No. 4 had an indoor picnic Friday, Sept. 27, in the basement of the Presbyterian Church. After an informal meal and clean-up, the girls conducted business, played games and sang songs. Martha Hulse was invested as a tender-foot scout and the following awards were given: Musician, Betty Jane May; Pioneer, Ruth Robinson; Needlewoman, Betty Jane May; 2nd Class, Betty Colville. Eleven girls received attendance stars for a 90 per cent attendance during the last year.

After another game, the meeting closed with songs and taps.

Boy Scout News

Boy Scout troop 158 met Friday. The meeting opened with inspection. The attendance was then taken. Patrols then met in their patrol corners and each patrol decided on an act. After each patrol presented its act to the troop the assignments were made and games were played.

The friendship circle was formed and the meeting adjourned.

STORKS MOURN DEAD KOLOMYJA, Poland

Hundreds of storks walking solemnly along the banks of the river Prut was the unusual sight witnessed by a lawyer here. On closer investigation,

Gas Doesn't Cost . . . It PAYS!

The principle of the circulating heater is to draw cool air from near the floor, pass it through heated drums and circulate it out the top into the rooms. Moore's gas-fired circulating heater also provides direct heat from the glowing radiants. No attention needed if installed with thermostat.
